

Leona Clarke is a multi award-winning actress and producer. She was born in Holland before moving to England, where she grew up in the Oxfordshire countryside. From a very young age she showed a passion in the dramatic arts; taking part in many school plays and playing the lead role as Anne in a Theatre Production called Anne of Green Gables at the age of 11. After performing ten consecutive shows, she joined a local drama school called Stagecoach where she trained every weekend in singing, acting and dancing. Here she took part in many more theatre productions and plays.

Leona has scored many lead roles within an abundance of independent and studio productions, most notably the leading role of Sheila Birling in the remake of JB Priestley's 'An Inspector Calls'. Most recently Leona has wrapped on feature films "A Touch of Vengeance", "Faith" and "Room Sixteen". She will be playing the leading lady in "Morris Men" - an urban vengeance action drama, starring alongside a wealth of industry recognizable talent.

To whom it may concern,

Working with Dom is an entirely different ballgame. He welcomes people's visions and ideas with open arms, and allows people the space to grow and develop their craft. He is a great team-player and has a wealth of knowledge that he is always happy to share.

I knew from our first day working together that we'd created a friendship for life. His positivity is inspiring; as is the case with any film set, we faced multiple obstacles during our first and second feature films together, but Dom has a way of never letting an obstacle become a concern, let alone a problem. Instead, he takes it as a step forwards and a learning curve, and always finds a solution.

Dom is very reliable and always sticks to his promises. If he says that something will be delivered by a certain day/time, it will be.

One of the things that I respect the most about Dom is that he can't be defined by convention. He embraces everyone, especially those considered the 'underdogs' of the world. He is multi-talented and a joy to be around. I'm grateful every day to be on this journey with him.

Leona Clarke, Actress
(07789) 244008

IMDB PROFILE